

TEN THOUSAND MORE MEN OUT

Carpenters Refuse To Work With Materials
Hauled By Non-Union Drivers.

WILL CALL GRAND JURY MONDAY

Labor Unions Seek To Indict The Express Companies
For Blacklisting Their Striking Drivers.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Chicago, May 26.—The building industry in Chicago is rapidly being tied up by the teamsters' strike. Fresh complications appeared today in a sympathetic strike of the carpenters and other building workmen. At a dozen buildings contractors faced the alternative of sending back the consignments of lumber delivered by non-union teamsters or having strikes on hand. In a number of instances the lumber was accepted by the contractors and the workmen quit.

Nearly Ten Thousand
It is predicted nearly ten thousand men will be out before night, including the furniture makers, the lumber handlers and the carpenters. The first lumber mill to shut down is that of the Landis company, where forty workmen were laid off.

Want Troops
The indications are if the strike continues the whole building industry will be at a standstill. The employers believe the police are unable to handle the situation and pressure is being brought on the authorities to call the troops.

Darrow
Clarence Darrow, the attorney for the labor unions, conferred with United States Attorney Healy this morning and immediately Healy announced a grand jury would be in session on Monday and representatives of both the employers and teamsters will be given an opportunity to present evidence in connection with the strike.

Would Indict Many
The union officials intimated they will make an effort to have the managers of the express companies indicted for alleged blacklisting and conspiracy. President Shea failed to appear in response to the summons to testify in the injunction proceedings this morning. Attorney Mayer asked the attachment to be issued for the labor leaders.

Actual Rioting
A crowd of two hundred strike sympathizers early this afternoon attempted to overturn an Adams express wagon at Canal and West Madison street corner. The guards on the wagon made a display of rifles, but no shots were fired. The riot call brought the police, who dispersed the crowd and made twelve arrests. Several rioters were severely clubbed by the police.

Speaks for Employers.
"The lumber interests demand protection day and night," declared Victor D. Sincere of the Employers' association, who has charge of matters pertaining to the supplying of drivers and police guards to struck firms, "and they have not got it. It will require 2,000 more policemen than those already in service and called for to protect the lumber district alone."

Mayor Dunning's call for 1,000 additional policemen, made on Wednesday, resulted in the enrollment of 155 new men Thursday. The mayor and chief of police declared all demands of the employers for protection were being supplied and that the local peace forces could control the situation until Monday at least.

In anticipation of trouble in the lumber district, the mayor instructed Chief O'Neill to close all saloons there between the hours of 1 and 7 p. m. in cases where crowds were permitted to gather inside or outside the premises.

Allege Protection Is Inadequate.
Against the assertions of the local authorities officials of the Employers' association point to the fact that many lumbermen are refusing to attempt deliveries, declaring they cannot get adequate protection.

Mr. Sincere stated that Street, Chatfield & Co. called for five drivers and were sent only three officers to protect them; that John Landis & Co. sent out five drivers and that their men were stoned and couldn't go on without more policemen; that the Soper Box company had applied to Capt. Haines of the Maxwell street station for policemen, but was unable to get them.

About forty negroes were among the new police recruits enrolled Thursday, and it is declared many of them are strike-breakers who had been discharged by the Employers' Teaming company. Employers' officials say the city authorities are up against a hard proposition in obtaining results from the call for temporary policemen, and probably cannot get anywhere near the number desired, to say nothing of future demands.

Shea Is Not in Contempt.
While the general strike situation was the same Thursday as on the preceding day, but with the feeling between the opposing sides more intense than ever, 1 events were transpiring in the courts, and long-distance interviews from New York put an end to rumors that the express companies still might aid the cause of peace.

Cornelius P. Shea, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, will not have to go to jail for contempt in refusing to answer questions in the federal injunction proceedings, but two of his confederates, members of the Railway Express Drivers' and Conductors' Union, Local No. 730, have been sentenced to imprisonment for an indefinite period.

John H. Donohue and Bernard Mulligan are the two men held in contempt and ordered to jail by Judge Kohlsaat until they answer the questions demanded of them in the hearing before Master in Chancery Sherman. Shea was discharged on the ground that he is under indictment by the Cook county grand jury for alleged conspiracy, and that his refusal to answer certain questions on the ground of self-incrimination was a valid excuse under the circumstances and not in contempt of the United States court.

Express Companies Are Obdurate.
The uncompromising attitude of the express companies was made known in an authorized statement by United States Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York, president of the United States Express company. The statement not only shows the determination of one express company, at least, not to take back any of its old employees who went out on a sympathetic strike, but makes it equally plain that no men will be employed "in their places who would act in the same manner."

Inasmuch as Senator Platt is supposed to speak for all the express companies as well as for his particular one, his statement sets at rest all talk about a settlement of the interchangeable plan of re-employing the striking express drivers.

The only thing having a suggestion of peace about it that still is pending is the prospective arbitration of differences between the team owners and the unions. It would not be surprising if the matter ended in failure, in which event the team owners, according to general belief, will be forced from their position of neutrality into the thick of the fight.

The head of one of the largest teaming concerns in the city is quoted as having told friends within a day or two that he was about to get into the strike. None of the team owners, however, will discuss the situation for publication at present.

General Strike Grows.
Here and there carpenters and others have refused to work with lumber hauled by nonunion teamsters, and every hour adds to the apprehension of a general strike that will throw scores of men in various branches of labor out of employment, and perhaps completely paralyze industry in the city, at least as far as the building trades are concerned.

Seven carpenters employed on a building in course of erection at 50 Woodlawn Park went on strike because lumber was delivered by non-union teamsters. Officers of the building trades unions asserted that these crafts are facing a crisis, and that some action toward relief will be taken at a meeting of the Associated Building Trades.

One hundred teamsters employed by ten hardwood lumber firms joined the striking drivers and a similar number of concerns are expected to become involved.

According to estimates made by lumber dealers, about one-third of the regular number of deliveries are now being made by the concerns affected. The country trade, which represents about 60 per cent of their total volume of business, has not been affected, it is said.

LA FOLLETTE IS LAYING IT ON

Asks For Stringent Laws Relative To Lobbying For Or Against Bills.

DOES NOT MINCE MATTERS AT ALL

Other News Of The Doings Of The Legislature—Senate
Busy With Bills—Much Legislation Pending.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., May 26.—Governor La Follette sent another special message to the legislature Thursday, denouncing the lobby and demanding that a penal statute be enacted to keep paid legislative agents from approaching members secretly for the purpose of unduly influencing them, and corrupting the law-making body. He recited the old boast of the railroads that for "sixteen years no measure had been passed by the legislature that was opposed by the railroads." The governor declared that this boast could no longer be made, but that still the powerful telephone, tobacco and school-book trusts, and also the railroads maintain expensive lobbies at the capitol, composed of men of little ability, but who have peculiar uses. The governor declared that many of these men employed by the railroads are so poor in ability that no "railroad would trust them to try a justice court case," but that they are powerful in secret personal contact with some members. These men, the governor says in his message, dog the footsteps of members, follow them to their hotels and entice them with all manner of amusements. He says the enactment of a law merely to keep lobbyists out of the senate or assembly chamber would not be enough, but that the attempt to influence the vote or judgment of a member of any other means than an argument before a committee in a public hearing, or by written representation to all members alike, should be made a penal offense punishable by a heavy fine or imprisonment or both.

The senate recently refused to concur in the Henry Johnson bill, which had already passed the assembly, providing that lobbying should be confined to public hearings and that secret lobbying be made an offense, and this bill was on the calendar yesterday for reconsideration. It was laid over, however, after the message was read and will be acted upon tomorrow.

The concurrence by the senate yesterday in the Warner state civil service bill sends the measure to the governor and as it was proposed as one of the most important La Follette measures, the governor assuredly sign it. It places the civil service of the state, including all the positions in the state departments, institutions or boards and commissions, that heretofore have been appointive by the heads of departments and have been passed out as political favors, under the merit system and the applicants must contest for the places in a competitive system of examination.

The senate discussed the university appropriation bill providing for continuing an annual tax of two-sevenths of a mill, which would amount to some $600,000 a year. Senator Whitehead offered an amendment providing a specific appropriation, arguing that it was better business policy to have each legislature appropriate for the university after full hearings have been had of the work and needs of the institution at that particular time. The senate passed the McGillicuddy architects' license bill, the Wright bill to raise circuit judges' salaries $600 a year, and concurred in the automobile bill. The anti-Bell telephone discrimination bill was advanced by a vote of 14 to 7, and the bill to strengthen the law for filing expense statements of candidates was advanced by a vote of 15 to 14. The senate then unanimously advanced the two-sevenths mill university appropriation bill after killing Senator Whitehead's specific appropriation amendment by a vote of 20 to 7.

JEW SOCIALISTS PURGE A WICKED RUSSIAN CITY

Destroy The Haunts Of Vice Kept By Members Of The Same Faith As Themselves.

Warsaw, May 26.—For twenty-four hours rioting on an almost unprecedented scale went on in Warsaw, with the result that at least eight persons have been killed and over 100 wounded and that almost every disorderly house in the city has been wiped out of existence. Mobs attacked those resorts Wednesday night and kept wrecking furniture till 1 o'clock. At dawn Thursday morning they resumed the attacks, fighting the owners and occupants of the houses. The disorders arose from an attempt of the Jewish socialist organization, called the Bund, to purge the Hebrew district of Warsaw of all disreputable persons. The Bundists, with the view of expelling their undesirable coreligionists, commenced to wreck disorderly houses, cafes and other resorts.

Smash Houses With Axes.
The damage to property has been considerable. There has been no pillaging, but the destruction of the furniture in the various houses has been absolute.

The mobs, armed with axes, smashed the doors and windows and brought the furniture out on the streets, where the rioters broke it into small pieces. The owners of the furniture, in attempting to defend their belongings, were attacked, beaten and even killed. Knives and revolvers were used freely and many persons were terribly injured.

Late at night the Cossacks fired on the crowds at two points, wounding four persons, in the first effort of the authorities to stop the rioting. During Thursday patrols occasionally appeared, but they regarded the proceedings merely as spectators.

State Constitution
That the constitution of the state of Wisconsin has become a thing of shreds and patches, outgrown and unsuited to the needs of the commonwealth were the arguments which impelled the assembly committee on judiciary Thursday afternoon to agree upon a favorable report on the joint resolution to submit to the people a proposition to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of revising and bringing up to date the fundamental law of the state. Assemblyman LeRoy of Marinette and Speaker LeRoy of Superior were the principal speakers before the committee in favor of the resolution. They argued that the conditions in the state had changed so much in the 50 years that the constitution had been in force that it had become inadequate for the protection of the people against the inroads of the modern corporations, combinations and trusts that the legislature was unable to adequately provide by law for the regulation of these mighty industrial developments. There is a strong sentiment of reluctance among the legislators to take any steps toward tinkering with the constitution and the adoption of the resolution by both houses is by no means assured.

University Bill
The senate discussed the university appropriation bill providing for continuing an annual tax of two-sevenths of a mill, which would amount to some $600,000 a year. Senator Whitehead offered an amendment providing a specific appropriation, arguing that it was better business policy to have each legislature appropriate for the university after full hearings have been had of the work and needs of the institution at that particular time. The senate passed the McGillicuddy architects' license bill, the Wright bill to raise circuit judges' salaries $600 a year, and concurred in the automobile bill. The anti-Bell telephone discrimination bill was advanced by a vote of 14 to 7, and the bill to strengthen the law for filing expense statements of candidates was advanced by a vote of 15 to 14. The senate then unanimously advanced the two-sevenths mill university appropriation bill after killing Senator Whitehead's specific appropriation amendment by a vote of 20 to 7.

The character of the disturbances is unprecedented. The whole affair is a conflict between the respectable Jewish socialist classes and the disreputable element. There are conflicting stories as to the origin of the trouble. One report is to the effect that the respectable Jews tired of hearing the members of their race called keepers of disorderly houses, thieves and usurers and other opprobrious names, and resolved, as the police were receiving bribes for protecting disreputable houses and persons, to take the matter into their own hands. Another report says that Jewish roughs, in the guise of members of the Bund, were levying blackmail on shopkeepers, thus enraging the socialists. In any case, the socialists seem to have determined on a crusade against the undesirable persons of their own race, with the result that crowds of men and boys are now systematically ruining the disreputable houses.

Wreck Palaces of Vice.
Extraordinary scenes were witnessed late Thursday night, when the crowds visited the better section of the city and demolished apartments filled with costly effects. Wardrobes, pianos and mirrors were thrown out of the windows. The mob in the streets left open spaces for the falling articles and then completed the work of destruction. In one place a quantity of jewelry was taken out and smashed with stones.

The whole affair was carefully organized. The leaders were supplied with the addresses of the owners of disreputable houses and scarcely a single resort in Warsaw escaped destruction.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

The commission which has in charge the building of the Panama canal, is being criticised freely because it went abroad to buy two ships to be used in the work. It has been currently reported that all material to be used will be thrown open to world competition and much complaint is heard, all along the line.

The commission explains that an effort was made to secure two vessels in the American market, suitable for the work, but without success, and as there was no time to wait for construction they were compelled to buy in outside markets. This purchase, however, they claim does not establish a precedent and the home market will be patronized for all material wherever practicable.

The Panama canal is an American enterprise. The people of this country are paying for it and it is no more than fair that they should share in whatever benefits may accrue from its construction.

The French government was compelled to abandon the enterprise after sinking a large amount of money and the same obstacles are yet to be met and overcome.

The unsanitary conditions which prevail in the canal zone are extremely difficult to overcome, and the panic which just now prevails, on account of yellow fever, is likely to be repeated many times before the work is completed.

While America succeeded in conquering the plague in Cuba, it will be found that Panama is a different proposition. A country that is practically on a level with the sea and much of it submerged half the time, is not susceptible to drainage. It is a good deal like attempting to drain the Everglades of Florida.

The construction of the Panama canal means the greatest piece of engineering that this nation ever attempted. It will mean an outlay far beyond the appropriation, when completed, and the sacrifice of more lives than resulted from the Spanish-Cuban war.

America is entitled to furnish the material and share in any profits that may result from the work.

CHICAGO NOT A PARADISE.

A lumberman from the northern part of the state visited Chicago last Tuesday to call on the Hines Lumber Company in which he was financially interested. Before visiting the lumber district he was obliged to be sworn in as a deputy. With a badge in his pocket he started for the Hines office with a horse and buggy.

After remaining in the office for a few moments he started for the company's yards when every wheel came off the buggy. As he struck the ground the air was full of missiles, although no one was in sight. He was struck on the head with a flying block of wood and when he regained his feet he let the horse go and made a break for the street car a block away. The conductor refused to carry him until he showed his badge, and then a mob followed the car for half a dozen blocks.

This is Chicago during the strike. A fine proposition when any man who enters the city takes his life in his hands. The city should have been put under martial law two weeks ago and both the mayor and sheriff are at fault. Organized labor may not be responsible for an organized mob, but innocent people are certainly not responsible and they are entitled to protection.

The boycott established seems to be regarded as perfectly legitimate, when it should not be tolerated for a moment. The general public have some rights that should be respected.

THE STATE CAPITOL.

The senate has passed a bill which provides for submitting to the people the location of the state capitol. If the assembly concurs the measure will become a law unless the governor vetoes.

It is unfortunate for the people of the state that the present legislature did not vote an appropriation for repairing the capitol building. An investment of $600,000 would put the building in good shape, and the accommodations would be ample for the next half century.

So far as the location is concerned, everybody was satisfied. Nature has done more for Madison than for any city in the state. It is the home of the university as well as the home of a large class of people who have come to regard both the capitol and school with proprietary interest. This is perfectly natural and would doubtless effect any other community in the same way, but it results in abnormal conditions which in many cases amounts to a disease.

The capitol, the university and the city of Madison have grown up together. There is no occasion to separate the trio. Madison without the capitol would be lost and the gain to any other city which might secure it would in the end be more of a loss than gain. Repair the old capitol building and let it retain its old home.

The Oshkosh Northwestern is publishing a series of articles on the editorial page, descriptive of the paper. They have to do with the cost of the paper, the thoroughness of its circulation and its value as an advertising medium. The idea is timely and original and will doubtless be copied by other publishers. The Northwestern is the best inland daily in the state and ranks high as a daily.

There is only one way to checkmate the mail order business, and that is through publicity. People will patronize the home market when convinced that they can do as well as in the larger cities. It remains for the merchants to inform them and when they fail to do this, there is no cause for complaint. The newspaper is the best medium for reaching the most people.

The governor is to be congratulated on the stand taken in regard to paying campaign debts out of the public treasury.

You can find most anything you look for in this world, including trouble.

The National Biscuit Company believe in advertising. They are conducting a campaign all over the state similar to the one now going on in Janesville.

A sympathetic strike may be all right as a pastime, but it lacks the first elements of common sense, and usually results in failure.

It is all right to boycott business but when the express companies retaliate that's a horse of another color.

How long will it take the Chicago strikers to play even on losses?

Appleton Post: With all the issues which have agitated and divided the Republicans of Wisconsin during the past four years settled, as they will be when the rate commission bill becomes a law, which is now assured, and Mr. La Follette in the senate, there would seem to be no occasion for further factional differences within the party.

Fond Du Lac Commonwealth: The announcement to the effect that Speaker Cannon is likely to enter the race for the United States senatorship, to succeed Senator Cullom, has a peculiar interest for Wisconsin. In the event "Uncle Joe" should relinquish his grip on the speaker's chair, it would cause a new deal all around and one which might mean important advancements for members of the Badger delegation. As a matter of fact it's about to trot out a winning candidate for the speakership.

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE
HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health is the Great Source of Power to Inspire and Encourage—All Women Should Seek It.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration, and the greatest helpmate of my life."

Mrs. Bessie Ainsley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness, whites, irregularities or the blues, she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Ever since my child was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with indigestion, female weakness, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman, and I feel so grateful that I am glad to write and tell you of my marvelous recovery. It brought me health, new life and vitality. Mrs. Jessie Ainsley, 611 South 10th Street, Tacoma, Wash.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ainsley will do for every sick and ailing woman. If you have symptoms you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

scratcher, in the person of Leman Springer, presided with becoming dignity over an irrepressible lot of youngsters as were ever gathered in a school. The program included: Music: "America"—by the School. Recitation—Palestine Azarapha Snowwell.

Composition: "Necks"—Bolvair Johnson.

Quartet—Miranda Amerina Smith, Pansy Violet Pumpkin, Peter Sorgum, Bolvair Johnson.

Paper—"The O'Flaherty Twins."

Duet—Betsy Serugius, Tim Timothy Seed.

Recitation—Peter Sorgum.

Piano Solo—Cinderella Bodkin.

This was followed by an old-fashioned spelling match for which Miss Gelsomina Brown and Mr. U. P. Davis chose sides from the audience as well as the school. After a protracted contest Miss Brown's side was declared the victor. The girls' dinner pails were then brought out and the boys were allowed to share their contents for a consideration. The net financial result of the evening amounting to over twenty dollars. "C. E. C."

A Bad Case of Stomach Trouble Yields to "Seven Barks."

ONE BOTTLE CURED IT.

Read what Mr. J. M. Pryor, of Huntsville, Ky., writes under date of November 3, 1903: "One bottle of Seven Barks cured me of a bad case of Stomach trouble. It is certainly the best medicine in the world, and will do all it is recommended for."

If one bottle of Seven Barks will cure a bad case of Stomach trouble, two bottles will probably cure a chronic case. We don't ask you to take our word for it. Our word won't cure you, but Seven Barks will. The only sure way to find out just what Seven Barks will do for you is to get a bottle and put it to the test. Mrs. Jones or Brown or Smith can't take it for you—that rests with you. It is a purely vegetable remedy, and easy to take—the dose is small, the taste a pleasant one. We'll run all the risk if Seven Barks doesn't cure you. Deposit 50 cents with us and take a full-sized bottle home and try it; if it fails, bring back the empty or partly used bottle and we'll refund your half-dollar. We've sold Seven Barks too long to run such a risk; if it wasn't a positive cure for any ailment of the Stomach.

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

Moffett's mustered out, and was back in a moment with the desired articles. "Um! And this roguish-looking face is Miss Stella, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"She doesn't resemble her sister much, eh?"

"That has been often remarked, sir."

When Mr. Lamm had made sufficient mental notes upon the pictures, he returned to the servant, and they were immediately replaced in their customary repositories. This time Mr. Lamm made so bold as to cautiously accompany the butler to the front of the house. The hush of a great calamity reigned everywhere. The house was built on a terrace, and the servants' quarters were on the floor below. That particular story was deserted. At a glance the detective took in the possibilities of the place. All the rooms opened from the wide hallway, separated therefrom by portieres. This was excellent for his designs, if he could find a suitable hiding-place. His restless eyes lighted upon a stained-glass window at the back of the hall.

"What is back of that?" he whispered.

"Toilet room, sir."

"Is that window movable?"

"I believe so, sir; but it is never moved."

"Where does that room open from?"

"From the back hall."

"Very well, Moffett. I will lock myself in there. If there are any inquiries, you have accidentally twisted the key off in the lock, and will go for a locksmith to repair the damage. The locksmith will not be in. You understand."

Moffett, who was becoming resigned to his fate, though his teeth still exhibited a tendency to chatter, led the way to the room. Standing upon a chair, the detective examined the window. To his delight he found that it could be moved up and down. He took the liberty of making a narrow crevice between the lower sash and the sill. Reassured by the presence of another window opening upon the outer world, Mr. Lamm, who was quite alive to the bold risk he was taking, earnestly impressed upon Mr. Moffett the necessity for secrecy, and locked himself into the room.

The sound of a key turning in the latch-lock of the front door brought about a responsive stir from the story above. There was a rustle of skirts, and a woman, who Lamm imagined had been watching at a window, came down the stairs before the outer door was opened.

"Oh, Mr. Stackhouse!" It was a querulous, tearful woman's voice, and spoke in one of those sibilant whispers that distress the hearer more than would the loudest of tones. "Isn't it awful! My poor brother-in-law! Why haven't they sent the body? It's not come down with you? Oh, dear me, dear me, it seems as though I would go out of my head! Why, Thornton, Thornton, you don't know half what I've been through!"

Mr. Stackhouse placed his hat and coat on a chair.

"You don't know what I've been through," he said, in meaning tones. "Why is the house shut up like this? On such a night the windows at least should be open. Marion and Stella are upstairs together, I suppose?"

"Yes, yes. But, oh, you don't know how I worried about them both. And then the dreadful news of poor Paul's death came on top of my trouble about them. It's a mercy I'm not crazy at this moment."

"What have Marion and Stella been about, eh?" asked Stackhouse, sharply.

"Oh, Thornton, they went away yesterday, one after another, without saying a word. I never knew them to go to the city alone that way before. And, oh, Thornton, they didn't come back till the late train. I sat up for them with the creeps all over me the whole evening. And such strange actions, when they did come! Stella went up to her room crying. Marion wouldn't say a word to explain, and went upstairs looking—oh! so white!"

"Well, well," returned Stackhouse, impatiently. "It's of no particular consequence. We have other things to occupy our time now."

"Yes, indeed, Thornton," said Aunt Comfort, with a sob. She was a portly woman, but exceedingly nervous and dainty in spite of her size, and she made half a hundred purposeless movements in a moment when excited. "Oh, the body! Where is it? You must go straight back to Boston and get it. Those body-snatchers are terribly sly creatures. Thornton, did you read in yesterday's paper—"

Mr. Stackhouse could endure no more.

"Nonsense, woman!" he interrupted, sternly. "Leave this matter to me and attend to your household duties. But tell me," he added, immediately, in a voice which he vainly endeavored to render indifferent, "what sent the girls off to the city yesterday afternoon? Did you observe nothing? What did they say?"

"Oh, Thornton! Hush! They are coming."

True enough, there was a sound of a door closing, the rustle of skirts and the echo of voices simultaneously floating down the staircase from the region above.

Stackhouse took a step forward, but started back immediately, looking upward in a puzzled, apprehensive way.

"Oh, don't! don't! don't! I beg of you, Marion. On my knees I beg of you!"

A woman's voice raised in that keez, penetrating fashion that reveals a climax, an outburst of repressed emotion, uttering such words as these, could not be a common sound in such a house as this. Stackhouse, whose face was in direct line of the detective's vision, looked as if a bombshell had burst at his feet. He was speechless with wonder and dismay.

"Stella," returned an inflexible voice, "I command you to let me go. I know what my duty is, and I shall do it."

The other woman might have been silenced by fear or overawed by the sternness of her to whom she had appealed, for she made no further outcry. The footsteps were already on the stairs; a white skirt fluttered by the railing. Again Stackhouse took a step forward, and again he stopped. It may have been a gesture, on his wife's part or something that he saw in her face. Certain it is that he became a shade whiter, and that in his effort to speak his tongue seemed to cleave to the roof of his mouth. He stammered two words:

"Why, Marion!"

"Don't speak to me! Don't touch me! Never call me by that name again!"

The tone was certainly not a loud one. It could not be said that there was a theatrical ring about the manner of enunciation. The words were low, distinct, and uttered with such calm, terrible intensity that, blase as he was, Detective Lamm experienced a genuine thrill. He felt himself in the presence of a remarkable woman, and the same sort of keen and breathless interest with which he had followed great acting on the stage took possession of him.

"Oh, Marion!" It was the sister who spoke, and the tone was quite heartbroken and hopeless.

Stackhouse seemed to recover from his temporary paralysis.

"You had better go to your room, Stella," he said, in a voice but barely audible. "I must talk with Marion alone."

"Do not stir a step!" commanded the other woman, as Stella went towards the door. "I wish you to hear what little I have to say to this man. You, too, Aunt Comfort. Don't stand in the doorway there, looking so frightened. Come back. The more witnesses the better."

There was a brief interval, marked only by Stella's sobbing and the elder woman's wheezy ejaculations, uttered like signal guns almost every second.

"Marion Stackhouse, have you taken leave of your senses?" faltered the business associate of the late Paul North.

"No, I have just found them. Do not dare to associate your name with mine. This is the last time I will ever speak to you. Witness, Stella, and you, too, Aunt Comfort. From this hour we live apart."

"But Marion," interrupted the woman, "remember your promise at the altar! You are not feeling well, and don't know what you are saying. On this day, too, of all others, when your poor father—"

"Stop, Aunt Comfort!" interposed Marion, imperiously. "You do not know—how is it possible you should know—the terrible cause that impels me. My contempt for this man whom I have called husband—"

"What fiend possesses you?" interrupted Stackhouse, unable to restrain himself. "Called your husband? What do you mean?"

"A name is all I need to speak," responded Marion, scorn and contempt expressed in every word. "Marie Moisset!"

The name burst from Marion's lips like the accusation of an avenging angel. It is probable that Stackhouse staggered under the force of the blow. Mr. Lamm, who, without an instant's delay, turned his attention to putting that queer-sounding name upon paper ("Marie Moisset" he wrote it), did not see him again for a brief space, and in that time he may have slightly recovered from the first violence of his betrayed emotions. He was still agitated enough in all conscience. This man Thornton Stackhouse, whom Lamm well knew to be in his ordinary walk of life no more self-betraying than the polished surface of a mirror, had been so affected and overwhelmed by what his wife had said to him that he was weaker than a child. He tried to shake off his growing terrors. He endeavored to smile, to laugh, to pass over the affair as a joke, but the effort was a ghastly failure.

"Marion!" he murmured. "Marion! Who has told you? What scandalous has maligning me to my own wife?"

"Silence, sir! I am not your wife. This was my father's house. Either you or I must leave it. Which? Choose this minute."

"Marion! Calm yourself, I beseech you! Think of the effect, the occasion, the time. Who knows what people would say?"

"I do not care, sir. If you do, you should have thought of it before. It is too late now."

He turned his white face towards her. Lamm marked plainly in the ample light how his lips trembled, how his eyes gleamed.

"Marion," he said, in a fierce undertone, "are you enough mistress of yourself to think what my leaving this house at such a time will mean to the gossip? Can you not see that even I might be accused of complicity in your father's death?"

"And who should be if you are not?" the woman retorted, in a vibrant tone that pierced the detective's ears like a thunderbolt. There were simultaneous cries from her three visible auditors.

For several seconds after his wife had delivered herself of this terrible taunt Thornton Stackhouse seemed vainly endeavoring to articulate.

Then with a sudden movement he seized his hat and turned to the door. The voice which now came to him was so unlike his natural tones that Lamm would not have recognized it had the speaker been out of view.

"So be it," he said. "Nobody will ever know what this is to me or how I have loved you, Marion. But so be it. If my own wife turns from me who will have mercy on me?"

The door opened and closed violently behind the partner of the late Paul North.

Did he speak for effect or were the emotions that inspired his words genuine? It is certain that the amazed detective became strongly prejudiced in his favor.

There was an interval of silence, and then a flutter of skirts and a white, white face appeared at the foot of the stairs. Lamm knew at once that that proud, imperious countenance, the scornful red mouth, the flashing blue eyes, belonged to Marion Stackhouse. But, great powers! could that be her natural expression? And then he saw what was the matter. She reeled, caught at the railing, threw up her arms and fell like a log to the floor.

So indeed this stoical woman was made of flesh and blood!
